

- 1) I would like to have an IWB for both of my classrooms! I found the PolyVision Eno Classic. According to the website, “it is the first and only environmentally certified interactive whiteboard to combine the simplicity and ease of a traditional markerboard with high-performance interactivity—without cords, cables or costly installation.”

“Go from markers to multimedia, from ink to internet, on a virtually indestructible ceramic steel surface. Project your computer screen onto eno classic and navigate through documents, presentations or websites from the board. Make notes to your heart’s content with a regular dry-erase marker or with the stylus. In one simple click, save all your interactive notes to post, print or email. Or, reload the session tomorrow morning, and dig in again. It’s that simple.”

- 2) I would also like to have my projector ceiling mounted. I approached my former principal regarding this and was told it was too expensive to install in an existing building. Offered to pay for all supplies, but was denied!!!
- 3) I tweeted info on my document camera.
- 4) It is essential to have an external hard drive to make sure the main computer is backed up!

- 5) I learned that my Epson LCD Projector has directions for turning off the mirroring on my MAC. Not quite sure how it gets turned on sometimes, but I now know where to look for help on turning it off!
